McCarthy has publicly said he wants to hear from "the women" on the intelligence committee and that they are "not going to be intimidated" by the committee's Republican chairman. ADVERTISEMENT "You've got to get these women to come forward and be able to testify," McCarthy told the Los Angeles Times. "The women should not be intimidated by anything. They've got to come forward."

The four major female names so far that have been confirmed to testify before the committee have refused to show up for scheduled appearances, leaving the GOP majority on thin ice as it tries to hold public hearings and question key figures from the Trump campaign and administration. A handful of other female figures have said they are prepared to speak, but so far have refused to reveal their identities. "The women should be encouraged to talk and come forward," McCarthy told the Times. "It's very hard to get women to come forward to testify, and they should be encouraged to do so." As McCarthy works to secure a probe with access to those women, he is facing pressure from his own party to appoint a special counsel to examine the issue.

Democrats have demanded the appointment of a special counsel to investigate Trump's ties to Russia, and have suggested that top GOP lawmakers are trying to quash the investigation. "They have to be treated seriously," McCarthy told the Times. "You can't have a witch hunt on this." FBI Director James Comey James Brien Comey Democrats fear Russia interference

This invention relates to reflective image displays, in particular three-dimensional image displays comprising a three-dimensional light diffusing screen positioned in front of the display. A number of three-dimensional (3-D) display systems are known. Many of these comprise a semi-reflective light diffusing screen positioned in front of a passive display such as a liquid-crystal-based projector. Typically the semi-reflective screen comprises a light diffuser having a surface of predetermined optical density with a masking pattern of lines of predetermined optical density that correspond to the pattern of pixels in the display. The light diffusing screen must be positioned close to the display to enable a viewer to view the display, but the diffuser must be positioned far enough away from the display so that the image displayed by the projector is substantially unaffected by the masking pattern. This can be a problem because, as the diffuser is positioned further away from the projector, the viewer's field of view becomes narrower and reduced until eventually the field of view of the viewer is blocked by the diffuser and the viewer no longer has an unobstructed view of the display. The object of the present invention is to overcome the problems associated with semi-reflective light diffusing screens.
